Paul appeals for the release from slavery of his adopted son Onesimus. Jesus insists on commitment that has no time for the conventional ties of kinship and duty. Here are two passionate yet very different vignettes of the radically new idea of family and relationship that the kingdom ushers in. Common to them are the themes of suffering and sacrifice: Paul experiences imprisonment and Jesus' disciples are to carry the cross. Philemon must surrender his slave while Jesus' disciples must 'give up all [their] possessions.
